New York Times wine critic Frank Prial asserted that "Robert M. Parker Jr. is the most influential wine critic in the world." A lengthy profile of Parker entitled "The Million Dollar Nose" ran in The Atlantic Monthly in December 2000. Among other claims, Parker told the author that he tastes 10,000 wines a year and "remembers every wine he has tasted over the past thirty-two years and, within a few points, every score he has given as well."

Robert Parker (wine critic) - Wikipedia

Properly Tasting Wines As a wine critic, I am often asked what the best way is to enjoy and taste wines and I try to keep it simple. I don't want to make it too complex where people feel like that are in a classroom - wine must always be fun! Moreover, I don't want people to be intimidated by the process of drinking wines.
